Honoring Excellence

Each year, many directors submit information about their Sousa recipients to our official Sousa Winners page (sousawinners.com). These glowing descriptions of top students remind us that our awards recognize more than superior musicianship. The Sousa winners demonstrate that lasting contributions to a music program involve a blend of heart, humility, dedication, and service to others. Here are details about some of the 2022 winners:

This student has consistently demonstrated maturity beyond their years, exemplary musicianship, and overall character.

Dustin is also working on his Eagle Scout project to outfit the marching band and choir with sound systems. He inspires his peers to go above and beyond in their efforts toward musical excellence.

Mallory made an impression on our program from the moment she got to high school.

Laci instilled the energy, enthusiasm, and work ethic needed to kickstart this program.

Eliza is such an amazing flutist who matches her outstanding tone and musical skills with her amazing personality and character. She has won the Director's Award for Band, the Louis Armstrong Jazz Award, and now the John Philip Sousa Band Award.

A glance through the biographies of past decades illustrates just how many Sousa winners went on to remarkable accomplishments later in life as musicians, educators, community leaders, and parents who pass music a love of music on to the next generation. These stories of excellence inspire us to work even harder as we help directors recognize exemplary students. Let us know how we can help you in the year to come.

Detailed information about award policies can be found on page 30. If you have any questions about them or which awards would be most suitable for your school, please give us a call or send an email. We would be happy to help you. 888-446-6888 or awards@theinstrumentalist.com

John Philip Sousa

John Philip Sousa was a trailblazer as a composer and as a band director. He wrote 136 marches, 15 operettas, 70 songs, 11 waltzes, and 20 band fantasies. He also wrote seven books, of which two were novels. Some of his most famous marches are Stars and Stripes Forever, Semper Fidelis, The Washington Post, El Capitan, and The Thunderer.

Sousa was born in Washington, DC in 1854. He learned to play the violin and wanted to join a circus band at age 13. His father was a Marine and decided that the boy should enlist in the Marines as an apprentice musician instead. Sousa spent almost 20 years in military service over several stints. He became the leader of the Marine Band at age 26. It was there that he perfected his musical skills.

When Sousa left the military, he formed the Sousa Band, which played everywhere for huge crowds. He hired the best musicians and always programmed several featured soloists. The Sousa Band brought performances of fine music to smaller cities that did not have symphony orchestras. He was always eager to help struggling young composers, and his band probably played more new, unpublished American music than any other musical organization in the country at the time.

The John Philip Sousa Band Award was created in 1954 on the 100th anniversary of Sousa's birth with the enthusiastic approval of his daughters, Helen and Priscilla.

Father of the American Concert Band

Patrick S. Gilmore

(1829 - 1892)

Patrick Sarsfield Gilmore (1829-1892) played for every president of his day, including Abraham Lincoln. He was the music director for the dedication of the Statue of Liberty. In 1891 he made some of the earliest commercial recordings at Thomas Edison's laboratory in New Jersey. Among Gilmore's most famous compositions are When Johnny Comes Marching Home, Good News from Home, We Are Coming Father Abraham, Seeing Nellie Home, and Famous 22nd Regiment March.

Gilmore was known for grandiose performances and enthusiastic promotion. At the 1864 inauguration of a Louisiana governor, he enlisted a brass band of over 500, a chorus of 6,000, a battery of artillery, 50 anvils, and the church bells of the city. Later performances would employ an even grander scale of ensemble and helped build Gilmore's reputation and fame.

Gilmore's career came to an end just two days before the inaugural concert of John Philip Sousa's newly formed professional band. As a tribute, Sousa chose Gilmore's own composition, The Voice of a Departing Soul, for the opening number on his program. Thus, as one era in American bands ended, another was just beginning.

Louis Armstrong

(1901-1971)

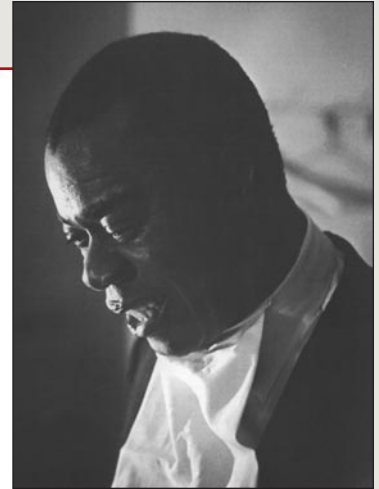

Louis Armstrong was a jazz pioneer and one of America's best ambassadors of goodwill abroad. From his fabled beginning in a New Orleans orphanage, he was introduced to the trumpet by a band director.

Early on he played with several New Orleans bands but soon left for the bustling musical city of Chicago. He went on to play with Joe Oliver, Fletcher Henderson, and Coleman Hawkins and later formed his own band.

When the Great Depression hit in the late 1920s the music industry suffered greatly. A number of clubs closed, and some musicians had to take jobs in other professions.

In the 1930s Armstrong moved to Los Angeles and gained popularity among the Hollywood stars who came out to see his club dates. He appeared in several movies and also performed extensively throughout Europe.

In 1948 he appeared on one of the earliest television broadcasts, a show called Toast of the Town that would later be known as the Ed Sullivan Show. Armstrong's trumpet playing would continue to inspire jazz musicians for decades to come. As Miles Davis once said, "you can't play anything on a horn that Louis hasn't played." Armstrong helped bring the American art form of jazz to the world, and his influence on music will never be forgotten. Outstanding examples of Armstrong's playing can be found on the albums Louis Armstrong Plays W.C. Handy, Satch Plays Fats, and Ambassador Satch.

Leonard Bernstein

(1918 – 1990)

Leonard Bernstein was born in Lawrence, Massachusetts in 1918 and studied music at Harvard University and the Curtis Institute of Music where he studied conducting with Fritz Reiner. In 1943 he was appointed assistant conductor of the New York Philharmonic and made his conducting debut with the orchestra when guest conductor Bruno Walter was stricken with the flu. This nationally broadcast performance brought him instant fame and led to many conducting appearances with other orchestras. He was appointed music director of the New York Philharmonic in 1958 and held this post until 1969. He continued to conduct periodically with the orchestra throughout his life. Bernstein also gained great acclaim as a composer of such music as West Side Story, Candide, On the Town, and many concert works.

Bernstein was particularly proud of his work as an educator. One of his many projects was a series of 53 telecasts of Young People's Concerts between 1958 and 1972. These concerts, which were a Philharmonic tradition when Bernstein began leading the orchestra, became a centerpiece of his educational mission. They were broadcast on CBS and covered the works of many great composers, some of the nuances of musical theory, and the meaning of music. The programs were syndicated in 40 countries. Leonard Bernstein died in 1990, leaving a rich musical legacy that continues to inspire people today.

Save time, stress, and money each year with a Standing Order.

Each spring we get frantic calls from directors who have forgotten to place their award order and face rush shipping charges in order to receive their awards in time. The end of the school year is always a busy time. Avoid the rush and put the awards you order each year on a Standing Order. Even if you make frequent changes, it is simple to adjust the order from year to year and add a purchase order before shipment.

How it works:

1. You receive a confirmation form and a catalog each January. The confirmation lists the awards you placed on the standing order as well as the current prices.
2. Make any changes at that time. Add or subtract awards or cancel altogether. You may add a purchase order number and update any information on your account. If you do not want to make any changes, simply do nothing, and the awards will be shipped automatically. Confirm your standing order online at www.instrumentalistawards.com, email awards@theinstrumentalist.com or call 888-446-6888.
3. Your awards will be shipped in early March (unless you ask for them sooner) and arrive in plenty of time for your award presentation. Additional awards may be ordered at any time. There is never any obligation to purchase the awards placed on standing order, and awards (in good condition) may always be returned.

All of these awards (including the names and images) are registered with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office and are protected by registered marks. Duplication of these awards or the creation of similar awards is prohibited and will be prosecuted. Please inform us of any violation of these registered marks.

Award Policies

- Limited Quantities: The John Philip Sousa Award®, Louis Armstrong Jazz Award®, and the National School Orchestra Award® are limited to one student per school per year. The National School Choral Award® is limited to two students per school per year. In the unusual instance of a tie, the director should certify this fact to us and present an extra award. All portions of a combination set must be given to the same student, not divided among students.
- Unlimited Quantities: The Patrick S. Gilmore Band Award®, National School Marching Award®, National School Color Guard Award®, Woody Herman Jazz Award®, Director's Awards for Band®, Orchestra®, and Chorus®, Quincy Jones, Leonard Bernstein, Chopin, and the Merit, Musicianship, and First Chair Certificates are available in unlimited quantities.
- Awards Recipients are selected by the director, music department, or other school officials, not by The Instrumentalist. We do not offer engraving services. (These awards should be rotary engraved, not laser.)
- Money-Back Guarantee: Any award may be returned in good condition for full credit. An award that is defective or damaged in transit will be replaced.
- Awards will be sold only to schools and never to individuals. The only exception is the certificate frame. We will initially bill another entity, such as a booster club or teacher, but the school receiving the awards is responsible for payment of these items. If an order is placed for multiple schools, the name of the school giving each award must be specified. Note: if ANY director at a school has an outstanding balance from a previous year, we will ship no further awards to the school until the past due amount is paid.
- All of these awards (including the names and images) are registered with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office and are protected by registered marks. Duplication of these awards or the creation of similar awards is prohibited. In addition, if you are presenting one of these awards, you must present at least one part of the student award to the winning student.
